

Acknowledgements

In this research journey there are a number of people who have helped me complete the journey much easier for second time round, to whom I am in deep gratitude.

I should particular like to thank my supervisor 'Master (in Chinese)' Prof. Carol Jones, for her professionalism, advice and in-depth knowledge in criminal justice and society in Hong Kong. Her exceptional patient and dedication as my primary supervisor is second to none. Without her constant encouragement and expertise, this research thesis will not have completed in second time round, I would have been giving it up long ago. I have learnt a great deal from her, not just in research, but also in various aspects of my life outside research.

I would also like to thank the Law School, the University of Glamorgan. Without the sponsorship from the Law School this PhD thesis will not be possible. Especially I like to thank Helen Power, my second supervisor, for her useful advice in criminal law, as well as reading the draft. Moreover, I would like to thank Prof. Michael Stuckey, for accepting me to the Law School and investing his faith in me to complete the thesis after the first time.

In UK, I would like thank a number of people, but particular to Haig Parry, who made my research task less painful.

In Hong Kong, I like to thank David C. Lam Institute for East-West Studies (LEWI), the Hong Kong Baptist University. They provided me with an institutional base, a research scholarship that made my empirical research in Hong Kong possible. My particular thanks go to Dr. Wendy Chan, Jane Cheung, Pinky Cheung, Christina Chan, Winifred Yau and Prof. Chan Kowk-ban.

In Telford, I would like to thank the School of Legal Studies, the University of Wolverhampton which provided me with library access and IT facilities.

Thanks must go to my most beautiful and caring wife, Doris Lau Lam Cheuk-man. Without her unconditional support and understanding this thesis will not come to fruition, especially her encouragement at the initial stage when I was considering whether or not to take up this research thesis. Thanks must also go to my Mother Lau Cheung Kwai Lan and Father Lau Sang for their support, but sadly, my Mother passed away (on 27th January 2006, at 20.24 hours) from a car accident in midst of this research journey, I missed her a lot, but her spirit, courage, and her love will continue to be felt in Hong Kong Society through her Memorial Scholarship in Sociology at the Chinese University of Hong Kong. Since 2006, our charitable spirit increased further, with a number of new scholarships have established at the Chinese University of Hong Kong. With great sadness, in midst of this second research journey, we lost another close member of family because of intestinal cancer in late 2011, my late father-in-law, Lam Ding Kwong, we missed him very much, particularly his mild manner, so we would be setting up another memorial scholarship under his name at the Chinese University of Hong Kong.

In the UK, Australia and Hong Kong there are friends who provided sustenance and support one kind or another: Prof. Yuet-Wah Cheung of Hong Kong Chinese University, Dr. Eric Chui of University of Hong Kong, Dr. Russell Smith of AIC, Prof. Peter Grabosky of ANU, Prof. Rod Broadhurst of ANU, Dr. Chu Yiu-kong, Lee Kowk Wah, Patricia Parry, Gary Wong. Also, a big thanks go to Momentous Asia Travel and Events Co., Ltd, particularly the company has funded all the travelling expense for research and provide support of the member of staffs, and a big thanks must also go to Ms. Julie Lydon, Vice-Chancellor of Glamorgan University, without her foresight at the late stage, this second journey would never ever be possible, more importantly, she has shown me that there is still some angel existed in Wales. Particularly thanks must go to Dr. Graham Brown. Also, thanks to various organisations and the staffs who allow me to access their organisations information and to conduct my empirical research interviews, without which this thesis never be possible. Finally, I would like to acknowledge all the international delegates and local participants who attended and shared their insight on cybercrime and computer forensics, at the International Conference on Cybercrime and Computer Forensic 2013 Hong Kong- 25th -28th August, in a 5 star hotel setting, this was first ever conference that brought together both social scientists and technologists to speak and share their views at the same platform, this conference I personally funded with half million Hong Kong dollars. At the conference, I brought together a number of leading Hong Kong sociologists to chair the panel session and to share their insights from a different angle on cybercrime, such as Prof. Lau Siu-Kai, who I am most grateful and acknowledge him in here. It is also my strong belief that by putting the theory and practice into the community, this way would help push the cybercrime movement in Asia region, which I am no doubt such movement would grow and snow-balling in the future in the region. With my knowledge on the subject area and healthy financial backing from me, 2014 International Conference on Cybercrime and Computer Forensic is in the planning stage, possibly in Taipei City, Taiwan, and 2015 in Malaysia.
